

2019 Feng Shui for the Year of the Yin Earth Pig

The beginning of the Chinese New Year is marked by the second new moon after the Winter Solstice. This makes February 4 the beginning of the New Year for 2019.

By this time, most energies will have shifted in our homes and places of work to 2019 patterns. Consider relocating daily activities in your home to take advantage of upcoming beneficial energies, and avoid or remedy areas that contain detrimental or stagnant energy.

Here's how to find these compass-oriented areas. Divide the floor plan of your home into a nine square grid (eight peripheral spaces and center Tai Chi area.) Refer to diagram below.

Spend time in the (+) locations if possible.

Negative energies (-) could be detrimental and are best to be remedied or avoided. (+-) and (-+) are basically neutral energy patterns, that can be used with appropriate remedies.

Beneficial energies move into the Center, NW, and East this year. More disruptive energies are in the South, SW and NE.

Especially, be quiet and avoid renovations in the NW (Tai Sui energy) and SE (Sui Po).

There's good news on the energies this year. Abundant energy ("8" Earth) fostering fame and fortune is the central tendency. Fire it up with some red; use the space, if possible. Walk this energy through to other areas.

The Center has abundant "Earth" energy this year. This might be a good place to get a project going. Fire, a lit candle, enhances the energy. Spend time here. Another good area to take advantage of for projects is the North.

For energies to remedy, add a little Water or wavy Blue in SE and East to reduce arguing.

Add some Metal or the sound of ticking from a clock to the NE and SW sectors, where heavy, sickly Earth energies resides.

When the "Cranky Old Emperor" energy in the SW gets aroused, you could have health-related problems. Remedy with moving metal, such as the sound of a chiming clock.

Metal energies move into the SW and East sectors this year. You might find the East area, in particular, a place where arguments escalate. Better places for "discussions" could be in the West, North, and Center of the house. Don't argue in the SE (Sui Po).

The energies mentioned above only describe yearly influences. There also are underlying energies that reside in every home based on the twenty-year period in which a home was built and its orientation on the land. Only a complete Feng Shui analysis can address these enduring energy patterns.
